Dear Mr Weisberg,

I hope to visit the U.S. for two weeks within the next few months, preferably before the end of May, for the purpose of meeting assassination researchers.

Obviously, I'd like to see you if you are agreeable and, indeed, available. The problem here arises from the fact that my flight to New York would be by a company operating an advance Booking Charter service, under the conditions of which I'd be required to book 60 days in advance of my proposed departure. I can appreciate that in these circumstances no-one can guarantee that he will be free on any given date but if you are willing to see me at some time and can inform me when you will definitely not be available, it will be of assistance.

Yours sincerely,
Alan L. Thomas
